URGES UNITY OF PURPOSE IN PLANNING FOR FUTURE

Traces Growth of Eighth Street Temple Organization-Program of Services Tomorrow Evening.

As one of the features in the two-day celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, which began last night at the Eighth Street Temple, Rev. Dr. Abram morning, in which he warned the congregation not to place too much reliance upon the compliments of visiting rabbis, "or even of your own rabbi," in searching for the proper thing to do in spiritual life.

He chose a text which he announced as, "Will two walk together unless they have agreed." Sixty years ago, he said, a band of twenty-two men came together in Washington, and they agreed to found what has since become the Washington Hebrew Congregation. He spoke of the unpretentious beginning of the congregation, the small and unsatisfactory hall occupied at first, the sacrifices made. "From a little congregation." Dr. Simon said, "these men, agreeing to be stirred by the old emotions, and walking together, rekindled in the city of Washington the lights of immortal truth. We are happy, indeed, that these few men, their wives and daughters, have been able to hand down to us through all these years this treasure of a congregation.

of the Bible and the flag. His subject was "Bible and Flag: Sheet-anchors of Our Nation." He said, in part:

"There was a time in the history of our nation when love of God and love of country were interchangeable terms, when the one could not be thought of apart from the other. As long as that holy union obtained, all that was noblest and best in our nation flourished. Right was might. Liberty was sacred. The oath was holy. The franchise was a precious privilege. Position of public trust was unpurchasable and inviolable. The red, white and blue, waving over a free, independent, God-loving people, was the emblem of the noblest government ever known in the history of man.

"As long as the people cherished the memory of that time, the nation prospered and the future looked bright. When we permitted the memory of it to fade away, our decline of what is greatest and best commenced. It is said that for three hundred years after the battle of Thermopylae every child in the public schools of Greece was required to recite from memory the names of the three hundred martyry who fell in the defense of that pass. It is also said that, when Greece cased remembering the martyrs of Thermopylae it forgot its patriotism, and, forgetting that, it became corrupt, and in its corruption found its grave. its corruption found its grave.

Forgetting Source of Inspiration. "Like unto the Greeks of old, we are forgetting the source whence the Simon, pastor, delivered an address at the regular services at the temple this spiration of their patriotism, and, for founders of our nation drew the ingetting it, we are losing our patriotism, and, losing that, our politics are more and more becoming corrupt and our morals more and more lax. We have grown out of the habit of looking back with reverence to the founders of our nation, to them that came in the Mayflower, that accompanied William Penn, Roger Williams, Pastorius and the others to the r deep religious fervor, to their exalted ideal of loyalty, to their rugged sense of right and honor.

"Degeneracy and corruption fester

Feels There Is Only One Answer.

"But how long shall we walk together? I am inclined to feel that there is only one answer, and that is that unless all Israel agrees and each one in Israel feels the force and responsibility of the bond; unless we all understand that our religion has sociables till past midnight. Mere boys, who ought still to be under watchful parents' or teachers' eyes, are permitted to sow wild oats, to poison the well springs of their own lives, and, later, those of others. Women vie with men in public revelries, smoke and drink with as little concern as if the very foundation of the respect due to their sex were not undermined by such vile practices.

"Greed puts even the most important sponsibility of the bond; unless we all understand that our religion has claims upon our sacrifies, we cannot continue to walk together. It is easy for other ministers, strange rabbis, to come here and compliment Israel, pat the Jews on the back, as if they had always agreed. But let us understand that we must face the truth. We want to be stung into an awakening. Let us not be hypocrites, and if we find that we are not walking together, let us tell the truth to each other, in dignity and self-respect, so that we may find a way, in Jewish loyalty, to walk together as we should."

Senster of Real to use all practices.

"Greed puts even the most important of the Ten Commandments to flight. What matters it that thousands of innocent human beings are slain or crippled, that the housands are laid waste, so long as r.ch profits are made by the manufacture and exportation of munitions of war? Unscruption of munitions of war? Unscruption shousands are laid waste, so long as r.ch profits are made by the manufacture and exportation of munitions of war? Unscruption among the peoples across the sea.

Smartness Rather Than Goodness.

"The education of our youth aims a smartness rather than at goodness Bible is read in school by teachers who privately ridicule it. Books on bridge and sports occupy the place in homes formerly held by Bible and prayer book; golf links and tennis counts are, in many quarters, not a little responsible for the emptiness of churches on the Sabbath

The opening prayer will be delivered by Rev. U. G. B. Pierce. Then will come the congregational responses and the lighting of Hanukkah candles. The congregation will sing an anniversary hymn, composed by Louis Stern, and Rabbi Louis Stern will deliver the meditation. Ralph Goldsmith will play "The Night Concerto," a violin solo by de Beriot.

Greetings will be extended to the congregation by both Simon Wolf and Mrs. Abram Simon, the latter the president of the Temple Sisterhood. Mrs. Nellie Wilson Shir-Cliff will sing "I Will Extol Thee," a soprano solo by Costa, and Rev. Dr. William Rosenau of Baltimore will deliver an address entitled "The Opportunity of the American Jewish Pulpit." Following this will come Bartiett's alto solo, "To Thee Our Grateful Hymns Shall Rise," by Mrs. Irma Stern Kalisher, with a violin obligato by Ralph Goldsmith. Mrs. Shir-Cliff and Mrs. Kalisher will then sing Biedermann's duet, "Grant Us Thy Peace," to be followed by an address the field as the court from the righteousness of their decisions depended the peace and welfare of the interior of the court day.
